

INSIDE TRACK

Rest assured

Many of our customers depend on our E-Series Articulated Dump Trucks (ADTs) to keep materials — and profits — flowing. That's why these machines are proudly designed and built from the ground up by highly skilled craftsmen at our world-class facility in Davenport, Iowa. Quality is a core value at John Deere, and we take an enormous amount of pride in making these machines as productive and reliable as possible.

Our customers have high expectations when they buy an ADT from John Deere, and we stand behind our promise of exceptional durability. In fact, we're so confident in the reliability of our ADT transmissions that they are now backed by our ADT Transmission Assurance Warranty. That means we'll fix any defects in materials or workmanship on ADT transmissions for five years after delivery or 15,000 hours (whichever occurs first) for all new, qualified models.*

But our support doesn't begin and end by building tough machines and transmissions backed by a great warranty. You need your ADT and other heavy equipment to produce day in and day out, which is why we offer our Big Parts Promise. If a transmission or other major component doesn't arrive by the next day, Deere pays the freight. And if your dealer doesn't have critical, quickly installed parts in stock or supplied by the end of the day, they're free.†

To ensure you get the parts you need when you need them, we require our dealers to meet thorough parts-stocking criteria. And we've invested millions in regional parts depot inventory for when dealer stock can't cover the need.

Because when it comes to your John Deere ADT or other heavy equipment, you can rest assured that we're always looking for ways to help you maximize uptime and profitability.
